PLAN A FINAL TEST FOR EUGENICS LAW

Case Will Be Taken to Supreme Court, According to Attorney General, Who Wants It Sustained.

Madison, Jan. 21.—"That decision in the eugenics case in Milwaukee is not final," said Attorney General Owen today. "This matter will be taken to the supreme court and we will exert every effort to have the right decision."

Mr. Owen refused to comment upon the merits of the case further. He said he had not held a conference regarding the appeal, but that the lower court's decision would be allowed to stand only long enough to have the supreme court pass upon it.

RELATIVES PRODUCE LETTERS OF HATRED

Julia Flake's Relations Reveal Notes Which Stated Her Dislike for Her Stepfather.

Galesburg, Ill., Jan. 21.—To substantiate theories that Robert Higgins threatened against the life of his wife was of long standing and was not encouraged nor participated in by Julia Flake, except under threats from him, relatives of Miss Flake today produced letters from the girl showing her hate of her stepfather, and satisfaction with her mother's second marriage.

In a letter written Jan. 10, 1913, to Mrs. Jennie Flake, an aunt in Galesburg, Julia said she would call him (Higgins) if he killed me to do it. I wish papa had lived. I wish I could live at Uncle Charlie's.

"Higgins said he would not go married if it had not been for me. Ma said, 'Well, why didn't you wait and marry Julia then.' He said, 'Because she would not have me. The other night he told me to wait, and Bob said I could leave them go till morning, so I did.'"

Julia's Galesburg relatives are doing all they can to shield her from the public eye. Higgins is not to blame for the murder. Higgins hypnotized her," said Mrs. C. E. Franklin, an aunt, today.

"She was forced to write those letters and to enter into the conspiracy. Higgins wanted his daughter, not her mother."

REAR ADMIRAL WATT EXPRESSES OPINION

Declares All Harbors in United States Should Have a Thirty-Five Foot Draught.

Washington, Jan. 21.—"Ships we are going to build in the future will have even deeper draughts than 30 feet, and the depth of prominent harbors in the United States is at least thirty-five feet," said Rear Admiral Watt, chief of the naval bureau of construction and repair, in a statement to the house naval affairs committee today.

Admiral Watt favored a contract for use by the navy of private dry docks at Hunter's Point, San Francisco, where if the proposed contract is executed a new harbor will be built capable of docking the largest vessel that could be passed through the Panama canal locks.

Construction of this dock public opinion today urged that this action was imperative.

Canal a Factor.

"With the opening of the Panama canal," Admiral Watt explained, "it is probable that our principal fleet will have periods of duty on the west coast. This provision would permit the docking of the largest ships at Hunter's Point, instead of sending them to Seattle or San Francisco."

"The admiral also told the committee that there were not enough dry docks for practical purposes on the Atlantic coast. "It would be unwise," he added, "to start the construction of any large dock that would not take any vessel that could pass through the Panama canal locks. The canal does not fix the ultimate limit of the size of ships, but it is the limit for a long time to come, and the limit of transportation from one ocean to another."

Panama, Jan. 21.—The Panama canal has reached such a condition of completion that a large ocean steamer could now pass through, according to reports today by Col. George W. Goethals.

There is thirty feet of deep water through the Culebra cut and the Culebra slide and it is Colonel Goethals' intention to send a Panama railroad steamer through the canal in April. Both ends of the canal are practically completed, only the electrical installation and clearing up remaining unfinished.

HIGH TAXES CAUSE MUCH UNCERTAINTY

SAD MIX-UP IN VARIOUS CIRCLES OVER SITUATION.

SHOW GENERAL UNREST

Republicans Particularly Unhappy Over Conditions—Seek To Explain Why.

N. B. This is one of a series of articles written exclusively for the Gazette on Wisconsin politics.

(By Bob Acres.) "Uncasy" lies the head that wears a crown.

Shakespeare Henry Fourth. These are strenuous days for our Governor. He has started explaining why the state taxes are so high. His chosen satellites have also taken up the burden. Even Tax Commissioner Haugen takes his little brief in hand and journeys forth into the social centers to give his reasons for them and the farmer, the manufacturer, the small tax payer, walks up the city or town treasurer's desk and pays them.

The taxes are high. You can't get around that fact. Taxes are higher than ever before. It is all right to say that the legislature is to blame. It is proper and just to announce in flippant tones that it is the demand of the people that they are higher but go right back to the start of the whole business and consider that "taxes are like young chickens and still come home to roost."

For years we have been undergoing one experimental commission after another. For years the machinery of the state has been added to it with an idea that the more wheels within the big wheels, the better the efficiency. It has been an experimental stage and the people are now paying the cost of the experiment. They will continue to pay unless something is done about it too.

But how has this affected the politicians. All this talk of taxes? It has given them the cold shivers. They are hurrying and scurrying to find some means to stop this great clamor they must seek something else to attract the attention of the voters. They must create new issues. To me they resemble the aristocrats of France just previous to the great revolution. For years they have rested secure in the position. Aided by radical reformers, fair minded democrats, spoilsmen all of them, they lorded it over poor Jacques until poor Jacques has risen up in his might, and if he once finds his power in the ballot and is given a good honest leader it will be the destruction of the Tuilleries, the tearing down of the Bastille, stone by stone, and the use of Madame Guillotine for many a political head. No wonder our over lords are worried.

McGovern has not yet come out into the open as a candidate for the United States senate on the republican ticket. Thus far he has not thought it necessary. It is generally conceded he will when the time comes and meanwhile he prefers to sit tight. Davies is still a negotiable quantity in the democratic field for the same reason. Davies has not been sidetracked and the field is not open to the author of the "Joe and I" letters. Paul Huston, clever little politician, is sitting fast waiting and watching his ear glued to the telephone to find out what is doing and if he is to have a chance. Governor, senator, any old thing for the field but he does not want to make a mistake.

Crownhart has received cold comfort from the absence of La Follette from the state during the past few weeks while nursing his incipient boom for governor. The Haugen cat dives to bask in the lime light and reiterate he is a candidate. Iky Karel, in Milwaukee, travels around the state and delivers addresses at this lodge or that lodge, just as he always has. He grins like a Cheshire cat and says: "I am glad to meet you." He has not said yet what he will do, but his friends say he is a candidate and he guesses they know. Any way, he is not a pretty near say who will be and that counts some let me tell you.

Billy Wolfe is back in La Crosse. He is in retirement. His little boomlet was short lived. He went to Milwaukee and then he went home. Like the "King of France" he marched up a hill and then marched down again. Anyway he had the satisfaction of being there when the mighty of democracy waited in the hall until Davies and Aylward got through with their parcelling out federal jobs.

Now comes the talk that Judge Dodge is going to be the judge of the men who want to get away from the Davies-Aylward crowd, ignore the Karel bunch and rally all good democrats to the standard of Wilson and democracy. Dodge is a good man. He has made a good supreme court justice. Before that he was a politician, but it will be surprising if he consents to run. The same crowd want to make J. L. O'Connor the choice for United States senator, but two men from Milwaukee would be too much to swallow and so they may pick Paul Huston; Paul who is waiting for lightning to strike somewhere in the west.

It is all a nice fine plot. Speak gently for fear you laugh, this haste to find candidates. But first of all the republicans must dispose of Roethe. Roethe he, it remembered spoke right up in meeting and said his little say. Such undignified conduct. Think of it. Roethe should never have made the campaign issue taxation, but he did, and now the rest of the pap suckers wonder what there are to do.

It was right in the convention at a Y. M. C. A. dinner I am told, that Judge Levi Bagerott, then a candidate for the office of attorney general, had his little say about Robert M. La Follette and his little say about the election of naming him the "Mad Mullah" of Wisconsin politics. Now Levi should never have done that. Levi knew the senator when he was not even governor. Levi sat in the convention hall at Madison and dived his thumbs until it became his turn in the cut and dried proceedings to rise and say ponderously: "Mr. Chairman, I move reconsideration of the vote on the last question." But Levi saw the error of his ways after he had been cast into the outer darkness, had served a term as speaker of the assembly and had now again in the backwoods practicing law.

However, Levi says things that are truths. They hurt, and when he recently said the following it hurt his erstwhile friends, cut them all up as it were, and they can not retaliate: "We have so many commissions with inspectors, game wardens, etc., running about the state that even the officeholders themselves are becoming ashamed. There is not a week that from two to five visit the different localities inspecting something. This has become so noticeable that when an inspector drops into a town the people laugh and say 'there is another one of those tax inspectors.' There is the nub of your taxes, gentlemen. Too many commissions. Too much government. What are you going to do about it. Are you going to continue to be the poor Jacques of France tolling in the fields to pay these taxes that your over lords may ride by you in a garage, in autos, travel on fast trains, or are you going to rise in your might and tear them from their high places as did your brother Jacques in the French revolution?"

Some of America's Scenic Wonders Are Discussed at Meeting Tuesday Evening.

That the advice to "see America first" is worthy of heed was emphasized by speakers at the monthly meeting of the Baptist Men's Club last evening. They presented arguments to show that the United States possesses many scenic wonders.

MR. AND MRS. G. W. CROSSMAN.

assessed many scenic wonders, mountains of as much grandeur and spots of as much historic interest as the European countries can boast. C. H. Wenzel was the leader of the evening.

A. P. Lovejoy discussed the snow-capped mountains of Switzerland as compared with those of western North America. He exhibited a number of excellent photographs, many of them taken by himself during some of his travel trips, showing especially the beauty of the snow peaks and the peculiar formation of glaciers resulting from the snow pressure on the mountain slopes.

Mr. Lovejoy contended that the wonders of the Canadian Rockies as typified by the scenery around Lake Louise at Lagon, were far more inspiring and beautiful than the best that Switzerland can show. The American scenery, however, is all wild, rugged, without the modifying touch of civilization, while in Switzerland the small villages nestled on the mountain side, with their red tile roofs and brown thatch, offered a very pleasing contrast. Mr. Lovejoy exhibited also several views of Hood and Mt. Rainier on the Pacific coast of the United States and some very good pictures of one of the large Alaskan glaciers which flows down to the sea.

A. F. Hall gave an interesting address on some of the important battlefields of the Civil War, speaking especially of Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Chattanooga and Chickamauga. He mentioned especially the liberality of the federal government in preserving the battlefields, erecting monuments and establishing cemeteries.

Rev. Joseph C. Hazen gave a talk on the Yellowstone National Park, which was illustrated by forty beautiful lantern slides, which gave a realistic idea of the beauties of this wonderful spot.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and from two to five cups of the tea, it is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

WITHOUT RELIEF PERUNA SAVED HER

Mrs. Thomas Hoyer, R. F. D. No. 1, Montague, Mass., writes: "As I doctored over a year without any relief and kept getting worse, I gave up all hope of ever getting well again. I was all run down, could eat scarcely anything. I was nervous and had such terrible pains in my right side and shoulder.

age, and Mrs. Crossman, seventy-nine, they are living comfortably in their home at 110 Terrace street. George W. Crossman was born near the city of Utica, Oneida county, New York, November 29th, 1831. He came west with his parents in 1844 to Wisconsin, settling at Southport, which is now Kenosha. Later his father purchased a farm south of what is now the village of Arion and the family moved into Rock county, March 3, 1848. He has resided in this county since that time with the exception of a residence of four years at Belvidere, Illinois.

Mr. Crossman moved to Janesville in 1895, where he has made his home. Mrs. Crossman, whose maiden name was Phileas C. Baldwin, was born in Beeson, Vermont, on the 25th day of December, 1834, and came with her parents ten years later to Wisconsin, settling at Johnson, where the family resided for a year and then moved to Beloit township where her father purchased a farm.

Both were of good New England stock, Mr. Crossman being a descendant of Governor Winslow, the second governor of the Plymouth colony. Many of the older residents of the city will recall an accident which came near causing Mr. Crossman's death on October 9, 1879, when he was caught in the tumbling rods of a threshing machine and was under the care of Dr. Henry Palmer for over two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Crossman were married on January 21, 1854, by the Rev. John Chamberlain. Two sons blessed this union, G. A. Crossman of Janesville, and Charles Crossman, who died in Bakersfield, California, January 18, 1903, and whose remains were interred in Oak Hill cemetery in this city.

Sport Snap Shots

The Cleveland Naps, who at one time or another looked like serious pennant contenders last season, will have to acquire something in the nature of a punch if they plan to cop in the season to come. Perhaps the one real reason why Naps didn't manage to land nearer the bunting last summer was their woeful lack of a good hard wallop when it was most needed. They started the season with a new manager and with a great things and in spite of injuries they managed to stick near the top of the heap. But when the critical moments arrived and several of the Naps were most decidedly not there. Somehow they always failed to put the stuff that meant bay leaves and glory. If the team ahead was trembling in its tracks and there were nice fat chances of the Naps pulling ahead somehow or other the Sixth City boys would be overcome with ennui and refuse to take the chance. It is to be hoped by Cleveland fans at least—that there will be a greater degree of pep and energy in evidence on the Nap diamond next season.

The average amateur athlete is very anxious to keep his amateur claim secure and takes great pains to see that no hint of professionalism is made in his presence. This seems to be true of every branch of athletics except roller skating. Every amateur roller skater is anxious to turn professional and jumps eagerly at any chance to throw aside his amateur title and earn a piece of change however slim. Walter Osmond, the Detroit professional champion, says that he has seen the first week of the championship meet here and after all of the amateur events have been played off, says Amun, "I expect to see most of those who won in the amateur events turn professional. They will take part in both entries. After winning what honor they can in the amateur contests they will try and knock down a little more change in the professional events. Every amateur roller skating champ is eager to turn professional and they do it just as soon as they think they can make good at it."

Mordecai Brown, the well-known "Three-Fingered" who is to manage the St. Louis Peds next season, declares that pitchers of the present day don't seem to have the confidence and assurance of those of an older day. "The more I observe the more I am convinced of this and there seems to be two reasons for it," says Brown. "A baseball squad today is made up of at least twenty-five men and about ten of those are carried as pitchers. Another reason why the lack of confidence today is because each young twirler knows that if the opposition gets to touching him up he won't be allowed to stay in the box very long. If young pitchers were made to realize that they had to pitch the whole game through whether they were being hit or not they would make a more strenuous effort to put the stuff over and they wouldn't give in so easily. In the old days they had to have the nerve, not only because they needed to pitch every game through, but also because they worked much oftener than the present pitcher, often every other day regularly."

It is doubtful whether the major leagues plan to break up the Federal league by offering players big prices in competition with the desired effect if carried out. The big leagues have thought that they might be able to put the Feds to rout by raising prices of ball players generally and thus bankrupt the new league. This scheme, at first regarded as a great way to bring about the Feds' undoing, is at present eliciting less enthusiasm than previously. In the first place the Federal league seems to have a great deal of change back of it and might be a pretty hard matter to exhaust their resources. Also, ball players might come to regard big prices as their real worth and wages and would demand the wages of a big league star for their performances. It is being pretty generally agreed that ball players are being paid well enough as it is and on raising their scale of wages, they think the big leagues had better think up some other way of putting the Feds upon the rocks.

ELKHORN ASKS FOR FRIDAY DATE AND GAME IS ARRANGED

Giants from Neighboring City to Clash With Local High School Five at That Place.

After several attempts to arrange a game for Friday night of this week, the Elkhorn high school accepted Coach Curtis' challenge and the contest will take place at Elkhorn.

Previously in the year, Elkhorn consented to the February 20th date, but later they cancelled, owing to a conflict in their schedule. As the locals were to play Fort Atkinson on Friday of this week, Elkhorn could not be given that date. Following the cancellation by Fort Atkinson for this week, the locals at once wrote to Elkhorn and the latter accepted.

The Elkhorns are fast this year. Three years ago they defeated the local aspirants at the Beloit college gym in an elimination struggle, 11 to 8. Two years ago the locals won from them at the Beloit college tournament. Elkhorn always seem to have a fast aggregation, and in addition, they are a bunch of giants.

A change at the local lineup will be made for Elkhorn's contest. Stewart, who has been playing right guard, will be shifted to right forward in Dalton's place, Dalton going to Stewart's position at guard. In this change, Curtis believes he can develop a more sure combination, for there will be an experienced man, Dalton, at guard, with Atwood, another experienced man, at forward. Ray will start the game at left guard with Sticks, first sub. Barnes will again be chosen second sub.

Elkhorn have been beaten by the Paderborn five so far this season. They will give the locals a good hard match, although Coach Curtis expects to come through the contest with a lead of at least two to one.

ULTIMATUM ISSUED BY FEDERAL LEAGUE

President Gilmore Advises Officials of Baseball Trust as to His Attitude on Contracts.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Jan. 21.—The Federal league today notified the powers of organized baseball that their signing of players, already under contract with the major leagues, will be fought out in the civil court. This ultimatum was in the form of a telegram which President Gilmore of the Federal league sent to President Baker of the Philadelphia Nationals, contesting he would "protect" the contract signed by Ad. Brennan and Will Killifer.

MARKET BASKET SOLVES HIGH COST OF LIVING CUTTING DEALERS BILLS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, Jan. 21.—The desire for convenience is the cause of the high cost of living, according to the National Democratic Committee man Fred B. Lynch, of Minnesota, who quoted a number of instances to prove his contention while sitting in a Washington hotel lobby today.

"The average purchase in a delicatessen store I know of in St. Paul is 31 cents," he declared. "It was found to deliver this order cost 7 cents. After more investigation along this line a friend of mine who has been put in charge of the store, cut out his delivery wagons, his telephones, and every other item which could possibly be lopped off, and then he cut his prices. The housewife has to go to the store herself and bring her goods home in a basket, but she pays only 17 cents a pound for porterhouse steak, 15 cents for round steak, and 12 cents for pork and mutton. Think what could be done along the same lines in New York where it is said the cost of delivering meats and groceries is 37 per cent."

"I have long known that telephones have been largely instrumental in increasing the cost of living. It is time the people should make a study of how to eliminate expenses that are not necessary, when dealing with the problem of how to cut down the cost of living."

AMUSEMENTS

SHEEHAN ENGLISH OPERA COMPANY TO BE HEARD AT THE MYERS THEATRE TONIGHT JAN. 21st.

This celebrated organization present a triple bill consisting of three of the world's most popular operas. Never before in this country has so much interest been shown in a performance of opera as in the combination bill given by THE SHEEHAN ENGLISH OPERA COMPANY. The performance consists of the tower scene with its famous Miserere as well as the dangerous scenes of "Trovatore." These two scenes comprising the most beautiful part of the entire opera. The scene of "The Boatman's Girl" which is given, includes "I Dreamt I Dwell in Marble Halls," and the beautiful duet following it "Then You'll Remember Me," "Bliss Forever Past" and the famous baritone between the tenor and soprano. The entire second act known as "The Kitchen Scene" of "Martha" is given, which includes "The Last Rose of Summer," the duet between the tenor and soprano. The Good Night Quartet and also includes all of the most delightful comedy of the entire opera.

The arrangement has met with instant success, as it gives all that is worth while in the three operas, and cuts out the tiresome explanatory routine. It gives the most interesting scenes, the best music and its appeal is to the music lover and casual theatre-goers as well.

AN ALL FEATURE BILL AT THE APOLLO.

Gregoire and Elmina may easily be counted the best act of its kind ever seen at the Apollo Theatre. Just how to classify their act is no easy matter. On the program they are designated "The Furniture Tusslers," and there is not the slightest doubt that the term fits like a proverbial glove. Furniture is the last thing chairs expect of course, that will lend itself to balancing. Those who have tussled with this kind of civilization will readily admit this and Elmina, however, prove that this is all a mistake. If you want to move a heavy couch or table or something equally unwieldy, just balance it on your forehead. Try it in the night some of the spectators feared for their lives as the male member of the company walked down the center aisle with a heavy couch balanced on one leg on his forehead. They took considerable self confidence to thus place the craniums of the public in jeopardy. Dena Cary, the sweet voiced singer, has repeated encores. She is a charming singer and is certainly a feature act.

The party that Joe Birnes describes must have been a party of all nations and many afflictions, but judgment from his description, all were happy and must have had a glorious time.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" will be shown again tonight. There are wonderful pictures showing Pompeii as it was and actual scenes of the city.

STATE SEALERS MAKE MORE TESTS IN 1913

Many Additional Commodities Are Re-weighed, During Past Year.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 21.—Statistics compiled in the office of the state department of weights and measures for the year 1913 show a larger amount of work done than in the previous year. In 1912 there were made 177,307 tests of weighing and measuring appliances by the city and state departments, as against 187,345 for 1913. Of the latter number, 125,399 were made by city departments and 62,538 by the state department.

In addition to the work of testing and sealing or condemning, the state and city sealers are required to make what are known as try-out inspections in which packages of meat, groceries, loads of coal and other commodities are re-weighed. In the cities of Wisconsin 27,930 of such try-outs were made in 1913 as against 26,780 for 1912.

Of the total number of scales, weights and measures tested in 1912, 25 per cent, or more than one-fourth, were found to be inaccurate. In 1913 the percentage of inaccurate appliances was reduced to 15 per cent, which is a net gain in one year of 13 per cent. The total per cent of inaccurate weighing and measuring appliances as found by state sealers in towns under 5,000 for the past year is 23. Inasmuch as the state department of weights and measures did not complete its work of testing for the year 1912, no figures can be compiled that will show any gain in the percentage of accurate weighing appliances.

During 1912, 79 prosecutions were brought for violations of city ordinances relating to weights and measures and the state law relating thereto. The number for 1913 is nearly doubled, being 150 for the entire state.

The figures compiled by the state department show many interesting comparisons. There seems to be a higher percentage of inaccurate wagon scales than of any other type. Of the 59 wagon scales tested by the state 53 were found to be inaccurate. Spring scales come next in point of inaccuracy. Of 1,406 such scales tested, 58 per cent were found inaccurate. Of the computing scales 37 per cent, and of counter scales 24 per cent, were found to be weighing inaccurately. Of 24,972 weights tested, 23 per cent were inaccurate, and of 9,872 liquid measures 20 per cent were found to be inaccurate.

In the office of the state department 8,966 tests were made in 1913. There were 6,304 Babcock cream test bottles tested, of which 12.3 per cent were found incorrect. Of 735 Babcock milk test bottles tested, 6.2 per cent were found inaccurate. In the figures, the records show that a large number of tests on milk bottles, berry boxes, barrels, etc., have been made throughout the state. Over 25,000 milk bottles have been condemned, many of which have been returned to the manufacturer.

The state department has now divided the state into eight districts, placing one man at a central point in each. In addition to the work performed last year, the sealers will this year be required to test the smaller weights and scales in drug and jewelry establishments. The state of Wisconsin is one of the first in the country to take up systematic inspection of prescription scales and weights, and the results so far obtained show

WHAT THE IMMIGRANT IS DOING FOR AMERICA.

I am the immigrant. Since the dawn of creation my restless feet have beaten new paths across the earth. My uneasy bark has tossed on all seas. My wanderlust was born of the craving for more liberty and a better wage for the sweat of my face. I looked toward the United States with eyes kindled by the fire of ambition and heart quickened with new-born hope. I approached its gates with great expectation. I entered in with fine hope. I have shouldered my burden as the American man-of-all-work. I contribute eighty-five per cent of all the labor in the slaughtering and meat-packing industries. I do seven-tenths of the bituminous coal mining. I do seventy-eight per cent of all the work in the woolen mills. I contribute nine-tenths of all the labor in the cotton mills. I make nineteen-twentieths of all the clothing. I manufacture more than half the shoes. I build four-fifths of all the furniture. I make half of the collars, cuffs and shirts. I turn out four-fifths of all the leather. I make half the gloves. I refine nearly nineteen-twentieths of the sugar. I make half of the tobacco and cigars. And yet, I am the great American problem. When I pour out my blood on your altar of labor, and lay down my life as a sacrifice to your god of toil, men make no more comment than at the fall of a sparrow. But my brawn is woven into the warp and woof of the fabric of your national being. My children shall be your children and your land shall be my land because my sweat and my blood will cement the foundations of the America of tomorrow. If I can be fused into the body politic the melting pot will have stood the supreme test.—Frederick J. Haskins in "The Immigrant."

There is plenty of food for thought in this plain statement of fact, for it shows the important part played by our adopted brothers from across the seas. We can not afford to pass stringent laws against immigration, for the wheels of American industries would be idle but for this kind of help. But there is still another side to immigration. It is the bitter, cruel industrial side which uses the blood and brains of the bodies and the lives of the children of immigrants to further our so-called progress, to build our great works, to carry on our great undertakings. Gordon Thayer thus expresses it in exceptionally strong verses in the Survey:

Breed us more men, ye Daughters of Toil; Ye alien mothers in far-off lands, Sire them strongly, clean brawn and bone. For we sift from the chaff the wheat alone. When they come to die at our hands.

Think on our greed in your travail-throes Think of us when ye bare your breast, Mine and smelter share claim their toll. Roads shall be broken and reach their goal. Though ye smell their blood from the West.

We build us strong on your woman's woe Pier of granite and iron span, Glare of furnace and caisson's gloom, Crane, and derrick, shall rear the Tomb.

Of him whom ye gave us—a man, Seas shall not bar your sons from harm; Steppe or forest or alpine slope, Our arms are long to grasp what we need.

The New World springs from your trampled seed; Ye drain the dregs of our draught of Hope.

"We would like to see that poem in the hands of every agitator against 'foreigners.' We believe it would cause them to temper their speech, to soften their assertions, to be just a little more genuinely American in their way of approaching a great and serious subject.—Omaha (Neb.) News.

NOT A LARGE CLASS.

"It is yet too soon to note just what the new treatment of criminals has produced or will produce. That it will lessen crime is problematical. That it will have a beneficial effect on criminals is more than likely. There is no doubt that it pleases the quickened sympathies of humanity. "It has been stated on good authority that a country-wide census, if it could be made, would show that criminals constitute less than one per cent of the population. The same authority asserts that it costs more to apprehend, convict and incarcerate this group than it does to educate the other ninety-nine per cent who are good citizens.

That so costly a machinery should have been operated so long does not speak well of our economy. Perhaps it has been so costly because it has been so antiquated."

Richard Barry, writing for the "Century" magazine on "New Hope for the Convict," has this to say about the small percentage of the criminal class: "His article has to do with new and humane treatment in our prisons and penitentiaries, so rapidly gaining in favor. The article is well worth a careful reading.

Chicago is all upset over a subway proposition made by an English syndicate which proposes to invest one hundred and fifty million dollars, and after a term of years, turn the property over to the city. The Tribune, and some of the other papers, advocate city construction and ownership through a heavy bond issue, and a campaign is now being waged to settle the question by popular vote. The balance of power, in all large cities is in the hands of the class of men who never pay a dollar tax. A question of so much importance should be submitted to the taxpayers. If it was, England would be invited to invest her money on short notice.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa and Attorney Brandeis of Boston have no business traveling around the country in single harness, as they would make a full team double. When Kenyon gets the railroads all bought, and Brandeis is installed as general manager, we will all be so busy clipping coupons, that life will be one long holiday, even in tax-ridden Wisconsin. Everybody will ride on a pass and many of us will be birds of passage most of the time.

That many of the unemployed in Chicago are idle because unwilling to work unless conditions suited their fancy, was demonstrated a day or two ago by a teacher in the Crane technical school. He went out dressed as a workman, without reference, and secured four different jobs in three hours, and all at good wages. Some people are constitutionally tired, and this class seem to have congregated just now in Chicago. The country is full of work and the outlook for the year is encouraging.

The easiest way to explain away the taxpayer's pay them, with a mental reservation to get even with the men responsible. It's a long road that has no turn, and there will be an election after a while, with only one issue, and this is more important than parties or politics. Put your tax receipt in your hat, and vote to turn the rascals out, when the time comes.

Our own Lenroot, inspired by the man who made him, has managed to break into the congressional record with a speech on the government owned Alaskan railroad. What Alaska might have been left alone will never be known. What she will be under government surveillance is yet to be demonstrated. The outlook is not very promising for investors.

PRESS OPINIONS.

"Ideal Vice."

Ashtand officials refer to their segregated district as having great "ideal conditions." "Ideal Vice."

"Think of it! An Inspector heatedly tells the committee he failed to enforce the law because 'public sentiment' was against it. Passing the presumptuous substitution of 'public sentiment' for established law, how does he know? Why does he not try the law, and see how it takes? That is what was done in La Crosse, and the people who believe in the 'ideal condition' of segregation until law came to supercede public corruption, now recent and declare for law and order. The trouble with Ashtand is that it has never tried the better way. Give the good people there a chance, and they will come to the cleaner method, just as people have done everywhere that both ideas have been tried.—La Crosse Tribune.

Taxes and Business. The truth of this tax hardship upon industry is not sufficiently recognized except by those who have unusual opportunities for knowing. One of the banks in Appleton has just paid taxes amounting to more than twenty per cent of its net earnings. Last year there are large manufacturing institutions on this river, reputed to be as profitable as manufacturing enterprises usually are, whose taxes amount to more than twenty per cent of their net earnings. Not only do they pay eight to ten per cent of their net earnings. Doubtless if newspapers elsewhere will take the trouble to investigate definitely, they will find that the same conditions are general. It does not take an intellect to guess the reason out what will happen to the industries of this state in a few years if this sort of thing continues, or grows worse, as it has been doing steadily for the years. Not only will no new industries be founded in Wisconsin, but industries already established will prepare to move to other locations where they will be on a more competitive footing with other manufacturers in the same line of business.—Appleton Post.

Fortunes in Sausages. Westphalia, in Prussia, is the home of the sausage. There, it is said, a trader will name no fewer than 400 different kinds of sausage. A sausage exhibition was held recently in Germany, at which 1,000 varieties of sausages were shown.

In this connection the story is told of a young Prussian who, though he had received an expensive training as a chemist, shut himself up in his laboratory, and instead of devising a new dye, safety match, motor engine, explosive, aeroplane or photographic lens, took pork, veal, olives, pepper, fennel, old wine, cheese, apples, cinnamon and herrings' roe and from them evolved a wonderful and totally original "wurst," the best of its kind. He has amassed a considerable fortune from its sale.

SECOND LETTER ON SOCIAL CENTERS

Request Made That It Be Reprinted in Gazette.—Deny Charge of Politics.

Evidently the accusation that the social centers which are being organized throughout the state are to be used for political purposes has struck home. Following is the second letter received relative to the organization of a social center at Fulton. The social center idea is a fine one. The Gazette endorses the plan in every detail, except the political feature. It is the old idea of the town gatherings, the old assembling of the various families, the old exchange of social intercourse and hearing addresses by capable speakers. Discussion of local topics and exchange of ideas. It is a good idea and every community should have a social center where it is possible.

However, the great danger comes from bringing in outside speakers who are furnished simply with a view of expounding political dogma. If the tax payers want to know why their taxes are higher this year than last, all they have to do is to look at their tax receipts, then take a walk around the capitol square on their next visit to Madison. Journey out to the university and see the millions being expended there and inspect the various commission rooms in the capitol building itself, and they can realize where their money goes.

The following is the letter and article received, both of which are given due publicity asked for.

Edgerton, Wis., January 19, 1914.

Editor Janesville Gazette, Janesville Wis.

Dear Sir: In answer to your editorial in Daily Gazette of Jan. 15, under title, "The Social Center," I have been asked by many members of our Social Center at Fulton, as their president, Mr. J. E. Wallin, to explain the purpose of our movement and protesting against what seems to us an unwarranted and uncalled for misrepresentation of your part.

I have been asked to insert this in view of the open attack you have made on our work, that you print the enclosed article in full in your daily and semi-weekly paper.

Yours truly, J. E. WALLIN, President Fulton Social Center.

To the Editor: There appeared in the Daily Gazette of Jan. 15 an editorial with the above caption. The article purports to give an explanation of the start of a social center movement at Fulton. This editorial was so gratuitously misleading as to be considered by the people of the whole community of Fulton as something calling for a vigorous protest.

For the sake of the good work that the people of this community are planning to carry out, I have been asked by many members of our society as its president to explain the purpose and object of this society which you have seemingly so wantonly tried to misrepresent.

For the past few years some of the people of this community have felt the need of something being done to better the social conditions here. While we have had during the past fifteen years a lecture course of high quality and a series of concerts by home talent, which has done much to make Fulton a place of social interest to all the surrounding community, yet we have felt that these were not enough and some larger movement was necessary to bring the whole community together in some system working organization for the uplift and social betterment of the community.

At the annual meeting of the Congregational church, December 5, this matter was presented for discussion and a committee of three of which I was chairman, was elected to arrange for some work of this kind. This work was to be both nonsectarian and non-political.

On Tuesday evening, January 13, we held a meeting and organized this work with 54 charter members. The Constitution which was adopted is as follows:

Art. 1.—The name of this society shall be "The Fulton Social Center."

Art. 2.—The object of this society shall be the uplift and betterment of this community in any way the society shall determine.

Art. 3.—This society shall be non-sectarian and non-political.

Art. 4.—The officers of this society shall be a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, who shall hold office for one year.

Art. 5.—This constitution can be changed or amended by a majority vote of the members of any business meeting.

The officers elected were: President J. E. Wallin, vice president Calvin Vest, secretary and treasurer C. W. Raymond.

At this meeting fifty-four adult persons of both sex were present. Every one of this number was enthusiastic and signed their names to the constitution and signed the constitution as charter members. The ladies furnished supper and quite a large sum of money was raised to carry on this work.

One week previous to this meeting for organization, in response to a request from a great many persons in the community, the committee decided to hold a meeting to discuss the subject of our taxes. The people were then paying their taxes and were interested in knowing why the taxes were higher than usual.

The committee considered this an important legitimate subject for discussion just at that time and decided to hold a meeting where this subject might be discussed. So a meeting was announced to be held at the church Friday evening, January 9, our hall not then being in a condition to hold the meeting.

The committee was in somewhat of a quandary as to whom to get who would and could give this subject in a purely nonpolitical manner. We decided that the best source of information was the state tax commissioner. Accordingly, I, as chairman, went to Madison and asked the state tax commissioner if they could send us a man who would open this discussion for us and give us some very much needed information. Mr. Haug, chairman of the commission, very courteously and kindly consented to come down himself and explain as far as possible, what we wanted to know which he did to the satisfaction of all present, so far as heard from.

We considered this, as the first meeting of our Society Center, a very pleasant and profitable meeting, and we propose to have at each meeting something of interest to all the people, which shall be open to full discussion.

Our next meeting will be held at the hall Friday evening, Jan. 23. Prof. Humphrey of the state experiment station, has been secured to open a discussion on "Dairying." A literary and musical program will open the meeting. Everybody is cordially invited to be present.

Now that the purpose of our society has been set forth, your readers can plainly see how utterly uncalled for and misleading was the editorial in this paper. There are no movements for social uplift vastly higher and broader than the editor of the Gazette has yet comprehended, if that editorial is to stand as his interpretation. The Fulton Social Center is one of them.

Yours, J. E. WALLIN.

Dear Sirs:—As you know, I have used your pianos under many different conditions, in recital, with orchestra, in small and in large halls, and their adaptability to all requirements has equally astonished and delighted me. Your vertical grand, style O, is the only instrument of its kind, as far as I am aware, capable of giving complete satisfaction to any one accustomed to play upon a grand, and I have no hesitation in saying that it is, without exception, the finest upright piano I have ever met with.

OLD SOLDIERS REWARDED FOR RECAPTURING FLAG IN FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] St. Mary's P.A., Jan. 21.—For his part in one of the bravest acts of the Franco-Prussian War, Charles Chagnet, of St. Mary's has just received recognition from the French Government. And today he proudly exhibits a handsome bronze medal pendant on a green and black striped ribbon. It was 42 years ago and one of the bloodiest battles of the long conflict that Chagnet and sixteen comrades distinguished themselves. The Prussians had captured their banner and they made a successful rally and retrieved it. Chagnet and thirteen of them returning to the ranks alive. The record of their deed was entered but it was only last March, that the French War Department rewarded the old soldiers.

RIVER IS RAPIDLY CLEARED OF DEBRIS

Cement Foundation Piers are Blasted and Last of Material Will be Taken Out Tomorrow.

The last of the piers, pilings and timbers which marked the site of the buildings that were burned on Milwaukee street bridge, will be removed from the bed of the river by tomorrow night, and as soon as the derrick and other machinery of the Gould company can be removed from the new Milwaukee street bridge, the structure will be open to traffic. The rest of the cement piers which supported the buildings of the Myers estate, were blasted today, with the exception of the two nearest the building owned by George Sutherland and occupied by the F. J. Bailey dry good establishment. As these are in line with the bridge pier and are rather close to the Sutherland building, it was not thought necessary or advisable to remove them. Some eighteen or twenty of the piles remain to be taken out. These and all the timbers removed from the river have been taken care of by the property owners who have had them hauled from the bridge as quickly as possible. The small safe belonging to Archie Reid and company, which was in the river since the fire, was rescued this morning.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

EXAGGERATING TRIFLES.

I AM growing more and more convinced that one of the chief reasons why many of us are so hard to live with,—both for other people and ourselves,—is because we daily and hourly lose sight of the relative value of things, exaggerating the worth of trifles and minimizing the value of realities.

Pretty Mrs. A. who finds it more agreeable to attend a late afternoon bridge than to go home and have her husband's dinner ready on time and cheer out how her boys spend the two hours between school and dinner; and clever Tom B. who allows his lovely young wife to sit alone with her thoughts five or six minutes in the week while he is absorbed in clubs and banquets, are typical cases.

Each is losing the most precious thing in life and getting in exchange,—what? An hour of idle sitting, a little passing about of bits of pasteboard, multiplied courses of indigestibles and stale after-dinner speeches. A friend of mine, who is a stenographer, went to live with an elderly aunt. The aunt had a large, pleasant home in which she was entirely alone and very lonesome; the niece had been living in an unattractive boarding house among uncourteous people and spending most of her modest salary for the right to live at all. It seemed an ideal arrangement, but it only lasted about a year. The niece had spent six months ago and I think they are both sorry now. The aunt was the time of parting it seemed to each that she had serious grounds for complaint against the other, on going over the grounds of their disagreement after they had cooled down, each was amazed to find how trivial they were. Some of them they could scarcely remember, they were so unimportant. For instance, the aunt would fuss and fret because Edna had left the bathroom window open and cooled off the room and Edna would think she couldn't enjoy her breakfast because her aunt insisted on having the red tablecloth in the morning.

And so each lost much that was really worth while because she let herself exaggerate the importance of little things.

How often we speak sharply to our nearest and dearest about some little thing that is really infinitely small and unimportant compared to the pain we inflict. Suppose mother did forget to tell you that someone called you on the telephone. After all, is that oversight such a big thing that you are justified in sending the arrow of your sharp reproof to pierce her tender mother heart? If there were any measure by which the relative importance of these two things could be judged, you would stand against before the measurement and wonder at yourself.

There are moments in all our lives when we get a truer sense of relative values. All too often these saner moments are brought to white sadness because they come too late to save from the torture of unavailing remorse.

You are careful in your shopping and your business relations not to pay half for a thing of little value why not be as careful in the greater business of human life not to pay for each ounce of dress an ounce of gold. Whoever does that is sure to find himself sadly bankrupt in the end.

ly, mould, chill and serve with yellow sauce. Two eggs, one cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla or one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and one teaspoonful of brandy. Beat the eggs until very light, add the sugar gradually and continue beating; then flavor.

Creamed Walnuts—White of one egg, one-half tablespoonful of cold water, three-quarters teaspoonful of vanilla, one pound of confectioners' sugar, English walnuts. Beat the egg, water and vanilla in a bowl and beat until well blended. Add the sugar gradually until stiff enough to knead. Shape in balls, flatten and place the halves of the walnuts opposite each other on each piece. Sometimes all the sugar will not be required.

Califlower With Tomato Sauce—Boil a whole califlower for ten minutes in fresh water; drain and boil until tender in salted water. Put into a vegetable dish, flower side up, rub thoroughly with butter, then sprinkle with salt and pepper. Last of all, pour over the califlower a pint of tomato sauce.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

STRONGER than steel is the sword of the spirit; swifter than arrows the light of the truth is.

Greater than anger is love that subdueth. —H. W. Longfellow.

VEGETABLES THAT GO WITH MEATS.

There are reasons for the various combinations of vegetables with meats as to flavor and with fruits, acidity as well as flavor.

Red meats seem to call for white vegetables: Potatoes, onions, stewed celery with steaks and roasts.

Fricassee chicken with rice is a time-honored dish, and young onions go well also with chicken and pork, when roasted.

Peas with lamb, asparagus with mutton, and even with beef it is not to be overlooked.

Without having a practical knowledge of the composition of food substances, we will all by some instinct combine foods, as for example, who thinks of corn beef without cabbage, or roast pork without apple sauce.

The vegetable acids are required to neutralize the natural oils. For these and other reasons we like mint sauce with lamb, orange salad with duck, and so on.

Cauliflower, brussels sprouts, and cabbage are all of the same family, and each goes well with steaks, chops or ham.

Green corn and young chicken, in fact, any kind of meat will be enjoyed with the king of vegetables.

The tomato is one of our most cosmopolitan vegetables. It goes well anywhere, as does the succulent cucumber. Cucumber with fish seems to be a favorite combination, and as fish is rather hard to associate with it is not so often prepared as it deserves. The plebeian potato is omnipresent and always welcome. Macaroni is a good accompaniment to fish and will combine most acceptably with it in an escalloped dish.

Green vegetables are necessary for the welfare of our department of the interior, and should be found on our tables the year round, when possible. Fresh lettuce is now a daily commodity in our markets, and with a French dressing is a most wholesome salad.

String beans and spinach go well with veal in the digestive harmony.

Rice, beans and starchy foods should be accompanied with Swiss chard, buttered beets or beet greens and serve with lemon or vinegar.

Hominy or corn bread accompanies a roast of tenderloin pork, or the highly-prized piglet.

There is no arbitrary rule which is so iron-clad that one may not occasionally stray from the path of common usage in the serving of vegetables.

TASTY DESSERTS WITH SMALL COST.

To have variety in desserts and yet economize on the use of eggs keeps the housekeeper up to her very best thinking these days.

It can be done.

All kinds of good ice creams do not require eggs. Any of the fruits used with them may be run through a colander, such as peaches, apricots and bananas, berries of all kinds should be rubbed through a sieve.

Then there is no end to the gelatin desserts, and using lemon or orange jelly as a basis, fruits fresh or canned may be molded with it and for a change, in combination with sponge cake.

The whipped cream dessert with only a very little gelatin, combined also with fruits, can be made at attractive as one desires. All kinds of desserts may be made with rice or tapioca in connection with apples, pineapples or any of the larger fruits. Then there are the good steamed fruit puddings which are fine for the winter months and there is never any question about every one enjoying them as the final bit of sweet.

Fruit Loaf.

Sponge cake, lemon gelatin, fruit.

Directions: Line a mold with strips of yellow cake or lady fingers; partly filled with lemon jelly and set in a cold place to harden. When nearly congealed fill with drained sliced peaches, cherries, apricots or bananas. Cover with the remaining gelatin and when cold and ready to serve turn on a dish and garnish with fruit and whipped cream, or serve with plain cream. Lemon jelly recipe will be found on the gelatin box.

Banana Box Whip.

Materials: Bananas, three; sugar, one-third cup; lemon juice, one tablespoon; vanilla, one-half teaspoonful; cream, one cup; chopped pistachios nuts, sponge cake.

Directions: Scrape and press the skinned bananas through a sieve or vegetable press. Cook sugar and lemon juice just to boil. Cool and flavor with the vanilla. Whip the cream stiff and gradually add the sugar mixture and the banana pulp. Cut off the top of a sponge cake and mix the center. Fill with the mixture, put on the cake cover and put whipped cream over the top. Slices of bananas and chopped pistachios nuts.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

How often "we create our own conditions and then turn and rail at God!" If anything deserving of credit or praise happens to us, that, please notice, is the result of our own untiring efforts, our splendid training, our powers of tenacity, wisdom and far-sightedness. My yes! We are the really elect, had we our really just dues we would be even higher than we are. All due to our own powers. Pardon the starchy but explicit expression, "We are some people," we are.

If anything happens to go wrong in our lives do we blame ourselves? Well, hardly! We blame the Creator of course. Else we blame our family, friends or anyone, everyone but ourselves. In our blind egotism we are to ourselves a king and, of course, "The king can do no wrong."

Do you think that no matter who or what you are, no matter where in life you let may lie, you may not improve yourself and remove the barriers that lie between you and your coveted goal, provided it be legitimate, providing you make up your mind that you will forge forward; that you will put in the background all the trivial disappointments and setbacks which may hedge your path? A strong will is what you need, what you must have to make life worth while; to make of it a journey that when you are on the downward slope and nearing the mile post where, for you, time stops and eternity begins you can look back and see that the trail you blazed along life's way was clean.

Life, we are told, is what we make it. Getting personal, what are you doing to make a success of your life? Does each year see you a bit ahead in everything than the year that's gone before? We are told that the older we grow the wiser we should be. How does it apply to the raising of little children as they should be raised? If you are a mother are you one of the many mothers who are helping the Creator Himself in the raising of little children as they should be raised? If you are a young man are you learning a trade, so that you will be able to make a niche in the world for you and yours some day? And if you are a young girl are you learning the fundamental principles of homemaking for no higher accomplishment can you have, all the conventionalities to the contrary.

Yet when I say all the conventionalities to the contrary, I am, for to do what is conventional is to do what is light and good. To learn to live single, quiet, successful lives is, within the reach and grasp of us all. Concentrated effort is the only tonic any of us need to be listed as an asset in our respective communities.

Plain, old-fashioned honesty, goodness and truth is not at a discount nor will it be, despite the wails of the ones who long to have, yet are not willing to strive; who are traveling at the high-speed and who, in the natural order of events, are riding for a fall.

Oh, well! We should worry! Eh? No, we should worry and keep so busy making our own business that we will have no time to keep track of the affairs of anyone else.

Tooth Talks

The newest philosopher of the world, the philosopher of progress, Henry Bergson says: "To live is to change; to change is to mature; to mature is a ceaseless process of evolution." The universe, nothing is finished; everything is in progress. Life is a perpetual progress.

In applying this information to tooth hygiene we find that when food is left on and between the teeth, the process of fermentation and decomposition soon commences. Why? Because any of the foods that we eat would do the same thing in any model, warm place that it might be left in the same length of time. In the mouth we have a temperature of nearly 100 degrees at all times. During the process of decomposition millions of microbes are hatched and fed. It is not a pleasant thought to harbor these in any great quantity for any length of time.

The process of decomposition and decomposition of food is going on an acid is formed. This acid, lying close on the teeth, the enamel of the teeth must suffer as it is composed largely of lime. As soon as the enamel of a tooth becomes "poulticed" by the action of the acid, decay of the tooth has been invited to commence work. This means disfigurement of the tooth and if not checked causes pain and an expense to have same repaired by restorative work.

Prevention is cheaper and a lot more agreeable.

If we are to prevent decay of the teeth and get away from mixing decomposition with our amusement, we must get on the job, so to speak, and mechanically remove the material that is the cause of it all.

The Chicago health department has demonstrated that in certain cases of scarlet fever, measles, diphtheria, etc., were tracked to filthy mouths and epidemics were averted. The public schools were stopped by the treatment of the mouths of infected pupils.

Oral hygiene work in various cities has shown that in certain cases of scarlet fever, measles, diphtheria, etc., were tracked to filthy mouths and epidemics were averted. The public schools were stopped by the treatment of the mouths of infected pupils.

The work of physicians that has caused the great reduction in infant mortality has put an artificial check on the law of the survival of the fittest. Formerly the weaklings were eliminated in the first few years of life, now by better feeding and the use of antiseptics, etc., many of these weaklings are saved. This results in a greater number of defective children, weak infants, that have been saved need not only more care than normal children to grow to maturity, but they are more susceptible to contagion.

Extra care should be taken of the mouth, as these children, not having strong constitutions, generally have soft teeth which should be kept extra clean to ward off decay. Every tooth is being to injure proper chewing of the food and thereby effects digestion. Good digestion, of course, is the key to good health.

The first wealth is health. The knowledge how to obtain it and preserve it should be acquired by every child. Public health education is a necessity. Ignorance of hygiene is a public expense that should be eliminated by proper information.

Herbert Spencer is an essay on "Education" asks the very important question, "What knowledge is of most worth?" How to live? We infer that as vigorous health and its accompanying high spirits are larger elements of happiness than all other things whatever.

Now, is it true that poor mastication does not threaten race extinction, but since these days of rapidity, an efficient worker must be a healthy worker and health depends greatly on proper mastication and assimilation and certainly happiness on health.

Fundamental knowledge of the teeth and their care is certainly worth while.

Heart and Home Problems

BY MRS. ELIZABETH SIMMONS

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl of sixteen. Am I too young to keep company with boys of twenty-two and twenty-four?

(2) I have been going with boys now for a long time, and I just like them as friends. I have never met one several days ago that I like better than any I have ever met. How can I win his friendship?

(3) Which is the more popular now—a blonde or brunette?

(4) How can I act to make boys admire and like me, as I am considered pretty?

(5) I am jolly when I am out, but they don't seem to notice me only when I am with someone else. Why is this?

(6) I work in a large office and am very nervous. I am so shaky at times I can hardly write even with a pencil and I can't write with a pen at all. How can I overcome this?

YOUR FRIEND.

(1) If by "keeping company" you mean hugging and kissing and playing at being in love, I think that a girl is too good for that. Neither do I think it best for a girl to "keep company" if it means that she gives up all her friends for just one man, without being engaged. But if you like, my dear, no matter what age they are, so long as they are respectable.

(2) Just be modest, sweet and good-natured and he cannot help but think you are nice.

(3) Popularity does not depend upon the color of hair, but upon one's disposition.

(4) Boys like well-mannered girls who act modestly, dress neatly, who are interested in boys' affairs and who can be jolly without being bold.

(5) I don't quite understand this, my dear.

(6) Perhaps you do not get enough sleep, or perhaps you worry too much, or do not eat nourishing food, or use your eyes too much. Get some outdoor exercise—skate or toboggan or take walks, without over-tiring yourself. Go to bed early and as long as you can, eat plenty of good food and think of pleasant things.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Please give me a recipe for divinity candy.

(2) What is good for babies that have the colic?

(3) How can I keep my baby from having a scabby head?

(4) Does it hurt a baby to take it out in cold weather at three months old?

MRS. L. J. CORBRY.

(1) Divinity Candy—Part 1: Three cups granulated sugar, one cup corn syrup, one-third cup water to dissolve sugar.

Part 2: One-half cup granulated sugar with water enough to dissolve it.

Put each part on to cook at the same time. Have English walnut meats chopped fine. When part 2 is done, so it will snap in ice water, pour it over the well beaten whites of three eggs and beat until part 1 is done (when it makes a very hard ball in ice water). Beat part 1 into the first batter full of part 2. Beat until very large. Add two cups nuts and two tablespoons burnt sugar caramel or vanilla flavor. Beat till ready to press into buttered pans and then cut in squares.

(2) First of all see that the baby's food doesn't make him colicky, and that his bowels move easily and regularly. A little paregoric will help, if baby is suffering. But yalwamm if baby is suffering, but always in calling a doctor the very first thing if there is anything wrong with baby.

(3) Keep the baby's head clean. You can wipe it off with a little olive oil.

(4) Most doctors think babies, almost from birth, should be kept out doors as much as possible. The modern mother tucks her baby up warm in his buggy and puts it out on the porch to sleep during the day, even in the coldest weather. So, if your baby is dressed comfortably, I can see no harm taking it outdoors in cold weather.

Beets With Sour Sauce—Wash the beets and cook in boiling water until soft. Drain and reserve one-half cup of water in which the beets were cooked. Plunge into cold water, rub off the skins and cut into cubes. Reheat.

Sour Sauce—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and pour on the beet water. Add one-fourth cup each of vinegar and cream, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of pepper.

Fried Eggplant—Cut eggplant into one-fourth inch slices and soak over night in cold salted water. Drain, let stand in cold water one-half hour, drain again and dry between towels. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in batter or dip in flour eggs, and crumbs, and fry in deep fat.

Baked Winter Squash—Cut in pieces two inches square, remove the seeds and stringy portion, place in a greased pan, cover with salt and drippings and allow for each square one-half teaspoonful of molasses and one-half teaspoonful of melted butter. Bake fifty minutes, or until soft, in a moderate oven, keeping covered the first half hour of the cooking. Serve in the shell.

Rebecca Pudding—Four cups of scalded milk, one-half cup of cornstarch, one-quarter cup of sugar, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one-half cup of cold milk, one teaspoonful of vanilla, whites of three eggs. Mix the cornstarch, sugar and salt, dilute with cold milk, add the scalded milk, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens, afterwards occasionally cook fifteen minutes. MUCH INTEREST IN

Captain Piny Norcross Sends Post Cards of John Brown's Early Home.

Miss Gertrude Cobb of the City Library, has received a most interesting letter from Captain Piny Norcross at Orlando, Florida, in which he recalls incidents of fifty years ago when the late Maor Cobb and Brother Joseph Dutton and Captain Norcross were in the army.

Accompanying the letter were several pictures of the scenes he writes about, and also some sent by Brother Joseph from his island home among the lepers in the Pacific.

Miss Cobb has placed them on exhibition in the library where they are receiving much attention, and the letter itself is published below:

Orlando, Fla., Dec. 31, 1913.

Miss Gertrude Cobb,

My Good Friend.—More than fifty years ago, your late father and I, B. Dutton (now known as Father Joseph in the leper settlement at Hawaii) and myself, as members of the 13th Wisconsin Infantry, were present at Ossawatimie, Kansas.

That is the spot where John Brown and a few associates made a brave fight against about a hundred Missourians. The issue then joined was, should Kansas be a free state or slave state. Practically that reckless skirmish was the beginning of the beginning of the great civil war a few years later.

My father, John Brown, as you know, had quite a career.

Born in Connecticut in 1800, was a tanner by trade, a devout member of the Congregational church, a red hot abolitionist, his own life, in fact, was a struggle. He was fifty-nine years of age when he called a secret conference of some of his strenuous friends of means at the little town of Chatham, Canada. They planned an invasion into Virginia for the purpose of liberating slaves.

In October, 1859, he and his reckless associates (about twenty-one in all) actually captured Harper's Ferry, Va., with his fine government arsenal and armory and took about fifty prisoners.

For this grave offense and for murder he was tried at Chambersburg, Va. He was found guilty and shortly after was hung.

He was twice married and had twenty children by his two wives.

So much on the John Brown episode of the past. His actions in Kansas and Harper's Ferry were not endorsed at the north.

They tended to make southern sentiment very bitter toward the free states.

During the first year and a half of the civil war there was a strong feeling at the north in favor of the south. Many prominent men and many newspapers came out strongly in favor of letting the erring sisters go.

The governor of New York state as well as the mayor of New York city were really in sympathy with the rebellion.

Desertions from the Union army were really encouraged. It was an easy matter to raise recruits in that city. Regiment after regiment from the great loyal west and northwest would land at the New York central station and march down Broadway, singing the grand old hymn, "It dispelled disloyalty in that city: 'John Brown's body lies mouldering in the grave—'

But his soul is marching on."

The tune as played by the brass bands was an easy tune to march by. It furnishes good, plain step music.

The words are easily spoken or sung. So it became a most universal marching tune.

It was a melody in camp and on the march, and preceding a battle.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe visited the great Union camps in the early part of the war and heard this wonderful refrain from thousands of soldiers.

She was thrilled by it—went home, woke up in the night and under the inspiring influence of the powerful melody wrote "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," to the same grand tune.

This much as a part of this letter. When I wrote to Dutton a few weeks ago I sent him the pictures of John Brown's home and the court scene and the photograph and called his attention to the fact that we were soldier boys together at Ossawatimie, Kansas. He returned them to me with a bunch of Hawaiian pictures.

If your father was here, he could add to the incidents of the Kansas experience—but he has crossed the river, so I send the pictures to you.

I would like to keep them—so if convenient—you look them over and if you like show them to Senator Whitehead—or Bliss of the Gazette—and then next year or some other time return them to me. Keep them a month, or till I come to Janesville next summer.

P. S.—In looking over my pictures I find a few of the Valley Forge campground, occupied by Washington in 1777. I went all over this famous campground last September. So I add them to the enclosed bunch.

Sincerely,
PLINY NORCROSS.

This letter written 10-31-13 but Mrs. Norcross went to the hospital, so this delay.

Jackson went with him to the elevator, watching his every movement with something which approached in its brooding care an anxious mother's. "Be careful when you cross the street! Good-by!"

"I told the chef, sir," said the butler, "and he says—"

"Never mind what he says. You tell him to stay. I wouldn't have him go for all the world. Go out and raise his salary and give him my regards. You understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"Say, come here. Where do you live when you're not here?"

"In Harlem, sir."

"Got a flat?"

"Yes, sir."

"Like this furniture?" He waved his hand at the extremely ornate contents of the room.

"Beautiful, sir."

"It's yours."

"Oh, thank you, sir! Anything else?"

"No, what else do you want? Get out! Don't bother me. I'm a business man."

He hurried to the telephone, laughing very earnestly, as if he really liked to laugh.

"Give me long-distance, please. Hello, long-distance; hello, long-distance. I want to talk to Jonesville, Conn. Jonesville, J—o—there, you've got it right. Judge Spotswood, attorney at law, Jonesville, Conn. Yes; this is 2458, Huyler. Rush it, won't you? Thanks!"

As he sat and contemplated with a smile of great intensity the tips of his slim patent-leather shoes, Wallace, having done his task, returned to him with a grave face.

"Well," said he, almost discouraged, "I've figured it all up, and the best that I can do makes the grand total sixty-one thousand four hundred and eighty-two dollars."

"How much?"

"Sixty-one thousand four hundred and eighty-two dollars."

"Spending money, my boy," said Broadway grandly. "Spending money."

With that he sprang out of his chair and rushed about the room with joy upon his face and showed his deep contempt for little things by breaking several costly vases, throwing six American Beauty roses in the waste basket and tossing cushions here and there. One of an especial elegance he threw out on Broadway, never looking to see whose head it softly lighted upon.

"What's the matter with you?" demanded Wallace. "Going crazy all over again?"

Broadway paused in his extraordinary movements. "Do you know what I'm going to do from now on? I'm going to make the loudest noise Broadway has heard since Dewey came home from the war."

"What are you talking about?" Jackson looked him kindly in the eye.

"Know what happened after you had left the room? A messenger boy with golden wings and a jeweled harp blew through that window, handed me this telegram and flew right back to the Golden Gates." He thrust the telegram at Wallace. "Read, read, read!"

The dazed Wallace read aloud. The reader paused. "God!" he exclaimed.

"Did he sign it?" Broadway begged, without the slightest incredulity.

"It's signed Judge Spotswood. Who's he?"

"My uncle's lawyer."

"Is this a joke?"

"It is if I'll make a reputation as a run man!"

"Why, this is the most wonderful thing that ever happened!"

"It is all of that, and more. Do you know what I'm going to do? I'm going to buy Brooklyn—and close it up."

But Wallace was not swept away by his extravagance. He really was a business man. "Pembroke," he reflected. "Why, he phoned. I took his message."

"He was here. Say, did you ever hear of the Consolidated Chewing Gum company?"

"Why, certainly. They're the biggest advertisers in America."

"Well, he's second vice-president. He's coming back at two o'clock."

"What for?"

"To bring me a check for twelve hundred and fifty thousand dollars! I'm going to sell him Jones' Pepsin."

Instantly the business man was upmost in Wallace. He became alert, suspicious. "He made that offer?"

"Yes."

"And you accepted?"

"Yes."

"Sign an agreement?"

"Not yet."

Wallace spoke now, with the firmness of a heavy hammer striking on an anvil. "And you're not going to."

Broadway gazed at him aghast. "Why?"

"Now, don't give me any argument. You've been a damn fool all your life and here's a chance to get even with yourself."

"Turn down a million two hundred thousand dollars!"

"Yes."

Broadway shook his head. "Not on your biography!"

Wallace was not impressed. "What you need is a keeper, and I'm going to take the job."

The telephone rang, and, as Broadway would have answered it, Wallace pushed him ruthlessly away. It was plain that he had definitely assumed command.

The message was from Judge Spotswood. As soon as Broadway learned this he explained that he had called the judge and wished him to come at once to New York city. Wallace gave him one and a half of pure disgust. Then he told the judge exactly otherwise.

"No," he called into the phone. "No, no; don't you come here. We'll come there."

Broadway was instantly rebellious. "I'll do nothing of the kind."

Wallace waved him off with a condemnatory hand, and continued talking to the telephone. "We'll be there at six o'clock."

In time for dinner. Yes; good-by! He hung up the receiver, and turned to Broadway with the hard but happy smile of the real business man who has succeeded in accomplishing a coup.

"Say, what are you trying to do?" said Broadway, not without resentment. "Run my affairs for me?"

"Yes," said Wallace, readily, and then called loudly for the butler. When he came he told him to pack, without delay, a grip for Mr. Jones, who, he gravely announced, was going traveling.

"To—er—Japan?" inquired the hopeful Rankin.

"Same thing, Connecticut."

"Look here," said Broadway wrathfully, "I don't intend—"

The bell rang.

"Go see who that is," said Wallace, in a most peremptory tone.

"Say, I'm not working for you, am I?" asked Broadway peevishly.

"Go on; do as you are told."

"Well, I'll be damned," said Broadway, but started toward the door.

Wallace, though, was thinking. "Wait! Hold on. It may be Mrs. Gerard. Didn't she say she would be back in half an hour?"

Broadway paused, dismayed. "That's Rankin."

"Same thing, Connecticut."

"Look here," said Broadway wrathfully, "I don't intend—"

The bell rang.

"Go see who that is," said Wallace, in a most peremptory tone.

"Rankin! Oh, Rankin!"

Rankin, breathless, hurried in. "I'll have the grip packed in five minutes, sir."

"Never mind the grip. We can't wait for it. We've got to make a train. See who's at the door. We're going out the other way." He seized Broadway's wrist. "Come on!"

Jackson, departing in a somewhat sideways fashion, owing to the steady pull of Wallace's strong arm, called back to Rankin: "Oh, there'll be a party of gentlemen here at two o'clock to see me, and—"

"What shall I tell them, sir?"

Wallace answered: "Tell them to go to hell," said he.

CHAPTER VII.

Jonesville was in mourning. Broadway's departed uncle had inspired not much affection; he had not been one to care to; but for many years, to the workers in the factory, he had been a sort of business deity—the semi-providential head of the great enterprise through which they gained their livelihood.

The folk of Jonesville had neither loved him nor revered him; he had been a sort of elemental necessity to their peace of mind; they had, so to speak, leaned with a feeling of security upon his stubbornness, knowing he would never sell out to the gum trust; if he did not sell out to the gum trust, the factory would operate; if the factory kept running, Jonesville would continue to eat, drink, and, in its crude, undeveloped way, be merry. Now that he was dead, a feeling of uncertainty spread a mild panic through the little town.

The judge was waiting for the two men in the hotel corridor. His worry over what the new owner of the factory might decide to do about the perfectly well known trust plans was quite as keen as anyone's; but his dignity forbade that he should make display of it.

It was something of a relief to him when Broadway hurried to him from the hotel office and held out his hand, although the boy's appearance was a shock to him. He remembered him as Higgins' mother had described him and as the dapper, boyish youth who had aroused the wonder of the town with patent-leather shoes and new dance steps. This pale, extremely urban man, young still, naturally, with a face which told untold tales of night experiences such as were not written upon any face in Jonesville, no matter what its age, nonplussed and confused him. He had expected normal changes; he saw metamorphosis.

"Judge," said Wallace, who, although a stranger, was first to grasp his hand, "I'm glad to see you." There was a harassed look upon his face as if he might have had a difficult time with Broadway on the train.

The judge took Broadway's hand. "And this is little Jackson? Broadway, we used to call you. Well, I'm glad to see you!"

"Thanks, judge," Broadway really was glad, and shook hands heartily, although the sybarite in him already was in strong revolt against the old hotel.

"I'll go in and register, Broadway," said Wallace. "And I'll put you down as Mr. Jackson. No use in—"

"Yes," said the judge approvingly. "The town is all upset. There might be—"

"I understand."

"If it should get around that the old mill would be sold to the trust."

The desk was near the door which led into the fly-specked corridor and the judge was listening as Wallace made terms with the clerk.

"What'll you take now, Mr. Wallace?" said the clerk, after careful study of the signature upon the register. "Or are you Mr. Jackson?"

"No, Wallace. I'm Mr. Jackson's secretary. And we'd like two rooms with—"

"Two!" said the clerk, astonished. "That was such extravagance as never had before occurred in that hotel."

"Yes; two connecting rooms, with a bath between, if possible."

The clerk gazed, open-mouthed. "Well, now," he explained, "I don't guess I can do that. We got a bathroom. Years ago a barber leased the shop and had it put in next to it. Thought he'd rent it out to strangers. But he didn't. It's still there, but lord, he's dead, and I guess the lead pipe has been used somewhere else. Know it has, in fact."

"Well—"

"Lead pipe, ye know, is valuable."

"Is it? Well, do the best you can for us. Telephones in the rooms, are there?"

"In the rooms? No. They're one across the street at the 'L' station."

"Well, we'll have to make that do, then. Can we get some dinner?"

"Dinner's over! Two o'clock. Supper's over now. Might fix up something, I suppose."

"All right, do the best you can for us and send it to the rooms."

"What? Send it to the rooms? What I should come along to feed ye! The clerk was definitely angry. These city folks!"

The judge stepped in. "I want you, and Mr.—er—Mr. Jackson should come to my house for your supper," he suggested.

"We'd better not, tonight, judge. Tomorrow, possibly."

Broadway cast at Wallace a pathetic glance. Could it be possible that he meant to stay in Jonesville till tomorrow night? Wallace sent him a look of warning.

"Well, if we can't have supper in our rooms, I suppose we'll take it where we can," he granted, determined that if Broadway really came back to Jonesville, as he intended to compel him, to some changes should be made in the hotel.

"Minnie!" shouted the clerk, in a reverberating voice, calculated to express itself, though miles might intervene. "Two suppers!"

"All right," he said to Wallace. "Want to wash? Wash basins—"

"We'll do that, anyway, up in our rooms."

"What with?" exclaimed the clerk triumphantly. "They ain't no water there."

"But couldn't—"

"Ain't no water," said the clerk indifferently, grandly, "ner no soap, ner towels, ner pitchers, ner no howls, ner nothin'." He turned away.

"But where's the key?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Miscellaneous as to authorship, but all good, first-class reading. Owner leaving town and does not care to move them. 588 Gazette.

This ad run in our daily paper received twenty answers before seven o'clock that evening, proving that the residents of our charming little city are studiously inclined.

All of the books were sold at a price that was a bargain to the buyer (as they were all standard works) and that put money into the pocket of the prospective mover.

Had the advertiser been anything but the "up-to-the-minute" young man that he was, he'd have toted his books along with him. As he was going far, this would have been impracticable.

He employed modern methods. Do you! And, if not, why not?

AN OLD REMEDY

Beef, Iron and Wine is one of the good old remedies that has outlived a score of patent tonics, reasonable in price, a satisfactory tonic, appetizer and mild stimulant. There is nothing better for that tired, worried, listless feeling or run-down condition of the system after illness of any kind. It tones the whole system, stimulates digestion, gives you appetite, is a good iron tonic for weak, pale children or old people, far more effective than malt extracts or so-called wine of cod liver oil that depend upon their stimulants alone. Beef, Iron and Wine tones and sustains, it assists nature to recuperate, it's a food to the sick and nursing mothers.

Mr. Pfennig, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist, prepares our Beef, Iron and Wine. It's always fresh, made from the very best extract of beef, wholesome, properly aged, hearty wine and soluble iron.

We don't sell ready-made, hand-made, factory-manufactured Beef, Iron and Wine. We believe and know that medicine should be compounded only by the experienced and scientifically trained.

Try a bottle of our Beef, Iron and Wine as made by Mr. Pfennig, 75c a full pint. Note its wholesome taste and invigorating effect. You will be more than satisfied. Get it at the Badger Drug Co., Milwaukee and River streets.
